

in nature. It is natural for everything to grow not only in size but number. A small acorn can become a mighty oak tree. A kernel of corn will grow a stalk producing one or more ears of corn. Each ear of corn has within it five hundred or more kernels, each having the ability to grow a new stalk with more ears and thousands of more kernels.

Another universal law is the law of circulation. In nature everything is constantly circulating. As a plant draws carbon dioxide, water, minerals and fertilizer from the soil, it creates oxygen, food and shelter for the animals. The animals become food for other animals, produce manure to fertilize the land, create more carbon dioxide for the plants, and eventually, return to the land. Everything is in constant circulation.

If this system works and these universal laws apply to nature, why can't they be applied to society? If everything is growing, reproducing abundantly, and constantly circulating, why is there lack? Why can't humanity live under the same system? It is natural! How did we become so unnatural? What is blocking the circulation, the growth and abundance? Wake up, humanity! Who controls your monetary system? Who have you given your power to? Are they honest, trustworthy and of impeccable integrity? Do they love humanity and nature? Are they serving humanity and nature? Are they arrogant, ambitious and self-serving? Do they lust for money, power, and position at the expense of humanity and nature?

As the new higher consciousness and energy continues in the awakening and healing process, these questions will be answered. There will be no rock left unturned, everything will be exposed, and the reactions to actions against humanity and nature will manifest. History will repeat itself until the lesson is learned. The universal laws and a natural system based upon universal laws will come forward. It is destiny.

This brings us to another priority of great value, and that is nature. Those who are awake will find that a quiet, unspoiled sanctuary in nature is their grandest treasure. They will see the necessity of preserving nature, and they will realize that all those dreams and images given to them are usually at nature's expense. That is when their priorities and values are in order.

In the days to come you are going to have to learn to manifest the things you need, not the money to buy the things. You will have to reprogram your thinking. Learn to barter. Become less dependent upon money. You have no idea how enslaved you are to a piece of paper that somebody said was worth something—a value system that is not in your control. While the system lasts, make as much money as possible. Do it with integrity, not at the expense of humanity or nature, and use it to prepare for a time when there is no money. Prepare not only for yourself, but for your loved ones as well. Extend your families to include others. Invest in the healing and awakening of individual and collective consciousness, as well as the preservation, restoration and cleaning up of the Earth. Those are the two priorities of an awakened one. Both are necessary for the continuation of civilization as you know it.

The greatest and most valuable treasures in the universe are consciousness and life. These are the priorities of an enlightened one.

Fear, Security & Sanctuary

There is a great fear and insecurity within the hearts and minds of humanity. This insecurity is created by fear of the unknown, fear of an unknown future, and a gut feeling that something is headed your way—something ominous consisting of great change that will affect each and every one personally. There are those who know they cannot continue in their present jobs, their present relationships and their present consciousness.

There are also those who hear a voice within their souls reminding them of their actions against humanity and nature. Their greatest fear is the reaction. Many invest in elaborate security systems and surround themselves with guards, yet they never ask themselves why there are so many people out to get them. Politicians, government officials and the majority of the rich wonder why they have so many enemies, including those who would like to take a shot at them.

The only true security is to realize that we are not separate from God, humanity or nature. There is nothing more valuable than a gainfully employed individual who loves and admires those who made it possible. What better security exists than a world of happy, well-fed, whole and healthy people? What better security is there than living in a clean, wholesome environment with a balanced ecosystem? What better security is there than to be able to walk among those who love and admire you because you have been of service to them?

What better security is there than to have a consciousness filled with love, joy, peace and actions directed in service to and for the betterment of humanity and nature? Reason this the next time you feel insecure and ask yourself what you can do to create both inner and outer security. The next time you look at your balance sheet, think of the eternal balance sheet and the karmic debits you are setting into motion. There is no sanctuary or security system that will save you from the reactions to your actions, and you cannot hide from your consciousness that creates your tomorrow.)

Computers & Intentions

There is a massive computer known as the "Beast," and the "Mark of the Beast" is the debit card. This will be the grandest misuse of technology and computers in the history of humanity. There is a group of clever individuals who govern the world economy. They have backed both sides of every war since the mid-1800s. They created the Internal Revenue Service to fund their wars. They control the Federal Reserve, which is a private institution. Just because it says federal does not mean it is owned by your government. The greater portion of the national debt, of which your taxes don't even cover the interest, is paid to them every year. They have been heavily involved in arms, drugs and other decadent behavior, the range and scope of which is beyond your wildest imagination. They are worth trillions and have held the better portion of humanity hostage for decades. Their latest endeavor is to have everyone on one massive computer. To do this they must collapse the economy and do away with world currencies. This way everyone will be on the debit card. The card will be governed by a series of computers that are in turn all governed by one massive computer, "The Beast." There will be a record of everything you buy, everywhere you go, etc. Your earnings will also be entered into the system. The questions you might ask yourself are the following:

- What happens when I give all my authority over to a computer governed by ambitious men whose lust for power at the expense of humanity and nature is insatiable?
- What happens when taxes, large government contracts given to their corporations and agencies, and a whole host of other charges are taken out of the better part of your earnings automatically, leaving you little or nothing for your labor?
- What happens when you become completely dependent upon the card for your food, clothing, transportation, shelter, etc.?
- What happens if they decide to take your card away because you no longer wish to play by their rules?

What these clever individuals do not understand is that when you try to rule or govern others, there is a grand loss of freedom. You yourself are governed by the next move of the ones you govern. How many must they govern and how much gold do they need to establish self worth? What they are really seeking is love, acceptance and security, yet they are going about it backwards. They are not loved and accepted for who they are—it is what they possess. They are often surrounded by people who also want what they possess.

Some of these people will stop at nothing to get it, which includes so-called friends and lovers. This brings us back to security. Not only do they have to worry about their friends and lovers. There are a whole host of others who also desire a piece of the kingdom. What the international bankers have not taken into account is 1) the awakening and empowering of the masses that will not so easily be herded like ignorant cattle, 2) those within their own ranks who are regaining their integrity and turning around, and 3) an ominous force called nature that will put an end to their plans in a moment.

There are many other misuses of computers which will become blatantly obvious to you in the near future. Computers never forgive. They have no mercy or compassion and certainly know nothing of freedom or unconditional love. These are all attributes of a Christed master or the Christ consciousness.

There is no freedom in a rigid, mechanical society. Machines were never meant to run nor govern man, for within each human is a unique, creative, ever-expanding and changing God. There is a saying, "There are no perfect men, only perfect intentions." Many intentions do not turn out so grand. Mistakes are made. When mistakes are registered in a computer, there is no compassion, mercy or forgiveness.

There are many that believe that everyone should adhere to a systematic format, and that this format is usually created to benefit those who hold this belief, or to appease their fears. How can one create a format that allows each unique God to express according to his/her soul's desire? How can one create a law or system that covers all that is necessary to know, including the knowledge of all past life, karma, to make an informed, just decision—a decision that may judge, condemn and punish someone? There is a greater system beyond the monkey mind, and the computers programmed by monkey minds are already at work.

Earth is an action/reaction world, known as the plane of demonstration, where unique and eternal Gods come to express. There are no victims, only self-created realities where all concerned gain wisdom from the experience. This is a system created by God, who honors free will, the right to self-determination, freedom and elevation into higher consciousness. It is not to be tampered with by fearful monkey minds that desire to control and manipulate. It is also not to be tampered with by the ambitious ones who desire to be the sovereign rulers and lords of humanity.

Many have created an elaborate, computerized system, and they have done this for several reasons. One is to control and enslave the masses and another is because of fear of the future and change. Some have done it for the sake of convenience.

* This results in a loss of freedom and stifled creativity. Computers can also stifle the ability to know all there is to know in the present moment. The greatest computer ever known is omniscient mind, the greatest internet ever created. Computers can become a dependency and a crutch. Computers accept only what is fed into the computer as truth, yet who feeds the computer, and isn't truth always evolving? We must remain clear in our goals and intentions concerning the use of computers. They can be a great asset or a great burden, depending upon the consciousness that engages them.

There is another civilization that once had international bankers, a war industry and those who equated self-worth to the number of people they governed and who made their money at the expense of humanity and nature. They governed by a massive computer, and there were constant internal wars over who would control that computer. All of these men desired to be the sovereign ruler. They were constantly killing one another and taking over the positions of the ones they killed. If they could not use character assassination, or public humiliation, they used other extremes.

What they did not calculate was nature's reaction and the awakening of courageous people who have had enough. They have since evolved and learned a grand lesson in sovereignty, freedom and the necessity for honoring and allowing each individual his privacy and the divine right known as free will and self-determination.

→ Their computers are now used according to their change in consciousness. Their computers can monitor the entire planet and send high frequency healing energy wherever it is necessary. They can alter time, distance and space, and even create or alter mass. There is one thing they cannot and will not do and that is to interfere in personal choice. They know one learns from experience, and they also know that to interfere with self-created reality, individually or collectively, would stunt the evolution of humanity.

→ This other civilization is watching humans follow the same course they followed a long time ago, hoping that you don't have to experience the pain and loss of freedom they did. They are loving, merciful and forgiving.

They will assist all those who choose these attributes as a way of life. Where are these brothers and sisters unseen? They are floating in your heavens in great crafts, awaiting an opening in consciousness. They are waiting for a conscious decision by humanity as a collective to end its destructive, warring nature, and to unite globally to choose peaceful coexistence with the rest of the universe.

Sacred Law

Sacred law and inner authority are what govern the lives of enlightened masters, as well as enlightened civilizations. Today's civilizations are governed by secular law and external authority. Understanding the differences between the two will be imperative to the advancement of humanity into the age of enlightenment.

Secular law and external authority are based on the premises that humanity is evil by nature, ignorant and incapable of governing themselves. Because of these fears and false beliefs, external authorities have been created which use judgment, condemnation and punishment as methods to enforce these secular laws. The rapid increases in crime, divorce and welfare recipients, and the ever-increasing burdens to enforce these secular laws using external authorities, are all testaments to the failure of secular law and external authority. Secular law and external authority perpetuate and escalate the very problems they were created to resolve.

Today's society is a grand reflection of law after law, enforcement agency after enforcement agency, and a bureaucratic nightmare of a system that is obviously a failure. Many will say, "What would happen if it wasn't there? There would be rape, murder, theft, etc." Is this not happening already on a grand scale? What have you got to lose? What has been going on legally within the system is another grand disservice to humanity and nature.

There is a saying, "The golden rule is: He who has the most gold, makes the rules." These rules are written to insure that those with the most gold keep it and acquire more of it, usually at the expense of nature and those with the lesser gold. Are not the laws of today written in favor of the rich who pay little or no taxes? Do we not have the best legal system money can buy? The great uneven dispersal of wealth is a by-product of bias, unjust, secular law, which is enforced by external authority. As the great uneven dispersal of wealth continues to escalate and the law become even more restrictive, the enforcement agencies become larger and more oppressive and prisons fill to capacity. The burden to pay for these large oppressive enforcement agencies becomes heavier and heavier. The middle class and the infrastructure begin to collapse and soon their numbers are added to the poor. The riots begin and what follows is a grand revolution.

The rich, honorable and dishonorable throughout history become targeted in this process. Secular law and external authority has been the demise of many great civilizations. As it evolves there is a loss of freedom. Creativity becomes stifled, and class separation and abuses of power escalate until the inevitable collapse of the system occurs. So where's the gain? Many religious institutions use the same methods of judgment, condemnation and punishment to control and enslave the masses. Their secular law consists of rigid codes and doctrines, and their external authority consists of a wrathful God (that no man or woman can appease—living far away in the ethers), hell, and a devil to invoke fear, unworthiness and intimidate their flock into staying within the fold. It doesn't add up. Fear and unworthiness are the clouds that separate humans from God. Their God falls very short of omnipresence, and why would a loving father create a devil to torment his children and a hell of everlasting suffering?

Do you know the quickest way to create criminals? It is by taking the divinity out of the individuals and judging, condemning, and punishing them, telling them they are wretched sinners, restricting their freedom and placing heavier and heavier burdens upon them. This is what occurs as secular law and external authority evolve. Where is the love in that?

Do you know the quickest way to enslave the masses? Remove God from the individual, and tell them that only you and your institution have the word of God and that they must forsake their own inner guidance for your outer guidance. Did you know that tyrants have joined with religious leaders using these very same tactics in their lust for power and money? Have you ever wondered what a Holy War was, and how war can be holy? What are you warring against, other than the children of God in all their diversity? What happened to the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill"?

The last point we desire for you to contemplate is that whenever you give away your power to an external authority, there will always be those who will snatch it up, betray a trust, and use it for their own self interest. This includes governments, religious institutions and in some cases, friends and lovers. There will be a great polarity between those who wish to empower and those who wish to control, manipulate and overpower. Power must return to each individual equally. All individuals must take the responsibility of governing themselves. Government must also consist of facilitators governed by consensus, and religions must lift and empower the individual into oneness with their own inner guidance and their own inner healer.

Sacred law is the law of love. It is that simple. Love God with all your heart, honor each individual as a unique expression of God, and behave as if the God in all life matters. Love must once again be the manifesting force behind all thought, all action, all creation. It is not that complicated.

The Codependent Victim/Savior Roles

The greatest disservice a savior can do is to save a victim from gaining the wisdom from their self-created realities. This creates devolution instead of evolution because one evolves through experience. When the experience is taken away, nothing is gained. In truth there are no victims, only eternal, powerful, manifesting Gods, walking through their own creations. Even children have their own agendas, along with a full overview of their lives before they choose to incarnate.

We live in an action/reaction world, known as the plane of demonstration, where consciousness creates reality. We magnetize people and events into our daily lives, according to our consciousness. Our attitudes, emotions and actions govern our destiny. How can there be victims in a world of self-created realities?

Did you know that when a victim fears being victimized and another desires to do the victimizing, and still another desires to be the savior, they all come together to co-create the drama? Victims also use their roles to manipulate saviors, unknowingly and sometimes habitually, into giving them either financial or emotional support. Saviors, on the other hand, believe they must earn the love and acceptance of the victim, by siding against the victim's enemy, and providing the emotional and financial support. The enemy is often another Savior who grew weary of being manipulated into giving any further financial and emotional support. Rather than saving, saviors support the victims in their roles, releasing them of any responsibility for the reality they create. Sound crazy? It is. A good portion of your law supports this behavior.

There are many saviors and victims vicariously working out their own unresolved issues and unhealed wounds through the legal and welfare systems. This has escalated into an unbearable burden, and the methods used by secular law and external authority have once again proven to be ineffective, only perpetuating and escalating the problem. So how do we end this madness? Victims must take responsibility for their self-created predicaments. They must be allowed to gain the wisdom from the experience. Educate them to take responsibility, stop blaming others, and move forward, healing the unresolved issues, wounds, patterns and false beliefs.

They must also stop manipulating others into giving them both financial and emotional support. The greatest disservice and insult to the powerful, manifesting God within a victim is to support him in his victim role. Saviors must learn to love and accept themselves and stop trying to earn the love and acceptance of victims by saving them. This includes those who make their living warring upon others for the sake of victims, or for their own self-aggrandizement. Saviors must also cease allowing victims to manipulate them into giving financial and emotional support.

Help is only help when one is taking responsibility for his self-created predicament, choosing to heal and gain the wisdom from the experience, and desiring to move forward. If the victim does not take responsibility, continues to externalize and blame others for his predicaments, and also refuses to heal and address the unresolved issues and false beliefs, any financial or emotional support will only reinforce, perpetuate and escalate the problem. The same powerful, manifesting God that drove them to their present situation can drive them out.

Taking responsibility for one's creations empowers one to put it in reverse. Both victims and saviors must become sovereign in their needs for love, acceptance and material needs as well. There is a unique loving, joyous, powerful, manifesting God within everyone. Stop turning Gods into beggars. Rather than giving them fish, if they are physically able, teach them how to fish. Educate, heal the past, and provide opportunities for them to help themselves. Opportunities that are not just minimum wage, ones that are worth shooting for—jobs they can be proud of. The same God within you is within them also. Remind them of this. They are your brothers and sisters regardless of their predicament. Let us support this truth and end the codependent victim/savior role. We cannot afford to perpetuate it any longer, either individually or collectively as a nation.

Power

→ The ultimate power in the universe is unconditional love. It supports the universe, it permeates all, is all that is, and holds all that is together. It is the manifesting force behind all creation. This awesome power is within you. Within each individual resides a unique, loving, joyous, powerful, manifesting God, born of the original light, from which nothing was withheld. "The light that lights every man (and woman) is the light of God."

So, what's the problem? The problem is that original light is buried under layer upon layer of fear, guilt, unworthiness, superstitious dogma, religious dogma, scientific dogma and a whole host of misperceptions and wrong conclusions from past experience. You have given away your power to governments, religious institutions, lovers, family and friends and have settled for a much lesser identity.

How many of you can say, "I am God!"? Can you separate yourself from omnipresence? What did God create you out of, other than himself? If we told you that you have the power to manifest anything you desire, most of you would look at your present predicament and say either, "No way!" or "How?" The trick is to realize you have been doing it all along. Everything in your world has been manifested and magnetized to you according to your consciousness. That is how powerful you are. Some of you are a little slow. Some of you have been very creative in both directions. You have done nothing wrong. You manifest for the experience. When one realizes what they don't want, they can move forward and manifest what they do want. How would you ever know anything unless you experience it?

Power is one of the most misunderstood and misused energies upon this plane. Many have attached power to lofty positions and material acquisitions—usually gained at the expense of humanity and nature. To do this they must separate themselves into a lesser identity and an alter ego. The alter ego has separated itself from omnipresent God, which includes humanity and nature. In truth, any action against humanity or nature is an action against God and against the true self. Guilt creates the unworthiness that clouds your original light, and the inevitable reactions to your actions create fear and insecurity.

All this separates you from your power. Many carry out their entire lives this way. Another great truth to contemplate is: The only reason anyone has any power over you is because you want something from them. Be it love, acceptance or a material need. Whatever it is, it is a dependency. Love, acceptance and material needs can all be found within self or manifested from your center, which is a powerful manifesting God. These are tips to help you regain individual power. In the future, it will be necessary to be sovereign in love, acceptance and your material needs.

It is also important to assess just who you have given your power

Many of you cannot imagine a vehicle that would take you anywhere, at any time, for free. You cannot imagine all of your energy needs provided by a little magnetic generator, or batteries that store all that energy and last forever. Many of you are programmed to think this is impossible or fantasy, yet your government and some of your industries have the working models. They even have a few extraterrestrial examples of this technology gained from various crash sites (a whole book in itself). There are also radionic devices that work on higher frequencies or subtle levels that can eliminate agricultural pests, induce rapid plant growth, and heal the body. As we mentioned earlier in the 1930s a pathologist named Royal Rife developed a prism microscope capable of observing all bacteria and viruses, including the viruses which cause cancer. He also developed a process to destroy them using a frequency generator which healed and inoculated everyone within an eight-mile radius. It was cheap and simple.

Now, what would happen to the chemical companies if drugs, chemical fertilizers and pesticides were no longer necessary? You know those poisonous concoctions that contain powerful carcinogens which are responsible for the majority of your birth defects? Do you really think it is natural to have diseases and birth defects escalating on a grand scale? What if you could heal the body without drugs and surgery? Would you really need all those doctors and physicians with their American Medical Association (which has banned these healing devices)? Have you ever contemplated what would happen if you removed the cause of the majority of your diseases?

What do you say to a mother who is wailing over her newborn child with brain damage or deformed arms and legs? How do you tell her that her child is a by-product of herbicides or pesticides or unnecessary drugs and was a calculated, yet unnecessary, risk? What do you tell a boy whose favorite horse died a painful death due to an ulcerated stomach caused by herbicides sprayed upstream? What do you tell the hunter when he sees elk grazing in clear cuts on government land sprayed with the same chemicals? What do you tell the fisherman when his fish are ulcerated, deformed or belly up? How do you tell them it's their turn to taste the poison?

What kind of people would create these products and continually use them, knowing their side effects? What kind of people would purposely put a lid on clean technology that would free the people and create a clean, wholesome environment? What kind of people would allow this? We will tell you what kind. It is those who profit greatly at the expense of humanity and nature; those who lust for money and power: those puppets who are bought and paid for throughout the agencies; those who fear losing their jobs and therefore turn a blind eye to the injustices to humans and nature.

There are those who are lazy and do not want to be inconvenienced and those who don't want their tidy little world to change. There are also those who are asleep or hypnotized into believing and doing what they are told—you know, the walking dead. Your government, as well as most world governments, are run by big business and it is not good business to allow you to have freedom. If you are no longer dependent upon big business for all your needs, that is bad for business.

If government was truly your government, "of the people, by the people and for the people," it would surely make this technology available to the people. There is a grand conspiracy afoot, the scope and depth of which you cannot imagine. We love you enough to tell you this. We desire for you to survive as a civilization, and we are here to get you through an age. Clean technology must come forward. As a collective, you have power, and it's time to demand the free, abundant, wholesome life you so rightly deserve.

You are living on an abundant planet with abundant energy. It is all around you. There is wind, solar, magnetic and many other resources you are unaware of. The Earth itself is a giant, spinning generator. There are those who have tapped into these energies, harnessed them and can meet all of your needs abundantly and without pollution. There are also those who realize you yourself consist of energy and, when there exists an energy imbalance, you get sick. They have also found ways to balance your energy, keeping you away from the drugs and the knives. As we speak, there are prototypes of cars with electric motors whose batteries get over 300 miles to the charge. Imagine an electric engine hooked up to a magnetic, perpetual-motion driven electric generator with a range that is unlimited.

This is the tip of an iceberg of suppressed technology. How about releasing a little antigravity and perpetual motion? It does exist. It is powerful, efficient and nonpolluting. There is no reason to hoard this technology or energy. There is abundance for all. Nature planned it that way.

Forests

One of Earth's greatest treasures is the forest. Nowhere else in the universe is there such a diversity of life. Believe it or not, Earth is the only planet that has greenery, a yellow sun and an environment conducive to such diversity. That is why it is so precious not only to your civilization, but to others not known to you.

These other civilizations are your brothers and sisters. They cherish all life—even you, despite what you are doing to the planet. They have been throughout the universe, and they look upon your forests in awe for their beauty. They are very concerned about humanity's recklessness, greed and self-destructive behavior towards the very platform for life that sustains you. Where grand forests and majestic trees once stood there are now endless miles of naked, barren land. Forests that once covered major portions of the globe are now reduced to small dots here and there.

You planted a few trees to replace them, but what about the 100 or 200 years it takes to grow them? What about the 700- to 1000-year-old trees that were taken in their place? What about the extreme droughts and survival rate of these seedlings in light of the coming changes? They are left unsheltered, only to burn up in the summer and be washed away in the winter. How can you claim this to be renewable? You can create a sterile tree farm, the destiny of which is to succumb to disease and pestilence, but you can't create a forest with an intricate, balanced ecosystem necessary for a healthy continuous life.

Your beloved brothers in the sky wish they could end this madness, yet they know humanity must learn from the reactions to their actions. It's part of the evolutionary process. They watch as powerful carcinogens in pesticides and herbicides are sprayed on the highest peaks, knowing the waters end up at your faucets. They watch as foresters battle against the fires, pestilence and diseases they themselves set into motion. The foresters have never realized that what they are battling against is nature's healing process. They do not understand that when you remove the biomass and disrupt the intricate, interrelated, balanced ecosystem, you get weak spindly trees that actually emit a sound that calls to the pests. The pests finish off the trees to become the biomass for the next generation.

Even the fires are a natural element, yet because of the droughts brought about by man, they have become massive infernos out of control. Did you know a great portion of your rain is generated by the tropical rain forests that are also rapidly disappearing?

These are not acts of God punishing man—these are acts of ignorance by man. Nature is reacting, trying to heal herself. Acid rain and even the ozone depletion from burning fossil fuels, are conditions brought about by man. The beloved brothers watch as humanity, in ignorance, declares war in a collective assault upon the very platform of life that sustains it. They see no logic whatsoever in engaging in such self-destructive behavior.

The greatest diseases ever to plague Earth are unbridled greed and the false belief in separation from nature. These diseases, if unchecked, will cause an end to civilization. Those in power upon this plane depend upon the continuation of this madness. They will not tell you about the dying condition of the planet. They can't afford to. Those who work for them cannot see the ignorance in continuing the assault. They also can't afford to. The continuation of their paycheck demands that they turn a blind eye and a deaf ear to those who know. It also demands that they accept facts and figures given to them by those who profit greatly at the expense of humanity and nature. There is one thing they will listen to and see, for it is an awesome force about to deliver a powerful message that will affect everyone. It will shake the very ground beneath their feet. It is the voice of nature, the voice of God, which are one and the same.

If humanity could but see what those who watch from the heavens have seen throughout the years. If you could see a time-lapse film, made over the years of your planet and its forests, it would shock you to see the destruction, its rapid spread and the present condition of the planet. It would be quite obvious where Earth is destined if this continues and how little time is left to do something about it. It would also be clear why nature must intervene and stop this madness.

There is an example in your heavens of a planet where the unbridled greed of ambitious men, who lusted for money and power, went unchecked. They raped and poisoned the land, developed nuclear energy and eventually unleashed it upon their own people. Great canals, pyramids and gigantic stone faces are all that is left of a once great civilization. The example of which we speak is Mars—a barren, desolate planet where the game is over.

Parenting Masters

There is nothing more precious than a child. Angels sing when one of their dear ones is born on Earth. The gift of a child can be a most loving, joyous experience. It can also be one of the most complicated experiences the human adventure has to offer. Children are multidimensional beings with multidimensional problems. They can be better understood as multidimensional mirrors. They mirror their environment, and their environment is void of boundaries. They react to the attitudes and emotions of their parents, their immediate environment and other planes and dimensions.

At ages two to four, children are wide open and can see planes and dimensions most adults are unaware of. It is not uncommon to see a child pointing in the air and laughing or reacting in fear to what seems to be nothing. They can see angels, ascended masters, fairies and gnomes. They can also see grotesque thought forms, such as monsters and discarnate spirits in need of healing.

The best advice I can give those who wish to parent masters is to become masters. You have the sensitivity and the tools to discern and heal any situation. In reality, all children are masters and children today are aware of their divinity more than ever. They are here to experience the Golden Age, and many are ushering in and anchoring this understanding on this plane. That is their purpose, and many are fully aware of their chosen mission. It will be carried out in their own unique way.

This leads into a very important understanding concerning just to whom children belong. Children are not owned by their parents. They belong to God and themselves. They have chosen their parents for the experience their parents and their environment have to offer. Children are their own souls with their own purpose for being. They were before you were. In other words, you have been taking turns, often switching roles in the process known as reincarnation. Children are not here so that parents may live their lives vicariously through their children by controlling or manipulating them into completing the parent's own unfulfilled desires. Children have their own dream, or unique purpose for incarnating, and enlightened parents would do their best to discover just what that dream entails.

We cannot address the loving joyous side of rearing children without addressing the side that is often not so loving and joyous. There are ancient understandings that were as true in my day as they are today. Many of today's parents have thrown the baby out with the bath water in search of a more enlightened approach to raising children. A child needs boundaries. Without boundaries, children become dependent and insecure. A child also needs clear communication and clear choices. They need to know what kind of behavior is unacceptable and what the consequences of unacceptable behavior are.

It is up to parents to be fair and just and to decide "together" what is unacceptable and what the consequences of acting in such a way should be. Parents must be consistent and support each other once they have agreed. Children need to be guided to act lovingly, joyously, harmlessly and constructively, without trespassing on the rights of others. (This is a hint for those who are wondering what acceptable behavior is.)

Many of today's parents consider discipline a thing of the past and altogether not spiritual. Some people are overreacting to the rigidity and heavy handedness of their own parents. Some fear losing the love of their children. Others believe that discipline stifles expression and closes a child to spirit.

The first step to becoming an enlightened parent is to forgive your own parents. Until you have done this, your relationship with your spouse and your children will suffer. Look at all the things you dislike about your parents and see if they are also within self. See what may have happened in your parents' past to cause them to act the way they did. They, too, are products of their environment and have gained many false beliefs and wrong conclusions from their past experiences. Their parents probably had even more hang-ups than they did and passed them on as behavior patterns. Your parents had as much, or more, to overcome than you do because the collective consciousness of their time was very limited. This plane and its collective consciousness is constantly being lifted into a more unlimited understanding. They had much to overcome. Forgive them.

Another grand misnomer is the fear of losing the love of your children for disciplining them. Your children will love and respect you more as long as your methods are fair and just. A child will quickly lose respect for a parent with no self-authority and will continue to test them until they set some boundaries.

Even after boundaries are set, children will continually test them and will, in some cases, react violently until boundaries are enforced. The boundaries are necessary for their own security, for without them they become very insecure. In a child, you are dealing with an ego or personality that must be trained to allow the master to come through. There are some great masters, now on this plane, enslaved by an ego that has run amuck due to improper, or no, guidance. There are also those who, due to having no boundaries or discipline, have become tyrants trespassing on the rights of others. They never learned what behavior was acceptable and never experienced consequences of unacceptable behavior. They are now expressing violently, destructively and without any respect for themselves, humanity or nature. Many of them were rewarded for unacceptable behavior by acquiescing parents and are now continuing this behavior as adults.

It is not uncommon to see adults pout, throw tantrums and manipulate each other using the very same methods learned as a child. In many cases, unbridled greed, anger or any other lower vibrational attitudes and emotions in many cases have run rampant on this plane due to unchecked, undisciplined, unenlightened children continuing inappropriate behavior as adults.

Healing the child within the parent is a prerequisite for enlightened parenting. Your children will help you in this endeavor for they will mirror back to you all you need to know. They will press you into action. We spoke earlier about children being multidimensional mirrors. They are like little Geiger counters reacting to their environment. Their sensitivity creates a greater environment than most of their parents have, and they are affected by, and are more sensitive to, unseen influences.

Some of these influences are negative, and they create a negative response in the child. There are negative thought forms, limiting mental concepts and discarnate spirits. Often, the discarnate spirits include some of the child's own past lives. Lower vibrational attitudes and emotions (thought forms and limiting mental concepts) can come from parents, friends and even discarnate spirits. A child's environment, as we said earlier, can be filled with negative influences. This can all be healed by the parents. It is only a matter of loving yourself, calling upon the Ascended Master of your choice, and using the tools given at the back of this book.

As children become older and more objective, it would be wise to teach them the tools. It would also be wise to listen to them. They can often see what needs to be healed. This will help you to gain conviction. Doing healings also lifts the adult, putting her in a clear and peaceful environment. These are tips to help you restore peace and harmony not only within self, but within others also by removing the outer, negative, unseen influences.

A child must learn to attune to the higher vibrational attitudes and emotions of love, joy, peace, harmony, service and harmlessness. To do this, they must learn to direct their attention to the higher aspects of self. This takes self-control and self-discipline. It is up to parents to guide them and divert them from attuning to, or acting out, any lower vibrational attitudes and emotions. Guidance includes basic disciplinary action.

A child that cannot learn self-control is either out of control or under the control of something else. Like attracts like, and a child that is allowed to attune to negative attitudes, or express negatively, attracts negative thought forms and lower vibrational entities. Children become channels of what they attune to. Thus, it is imperative that they be taught to use their will to attune to higher attitudes and emotions, and to express lovingly, joyously and harmlessly, honoring the rights of others. All the spiritual healings in the world will not help one whose will it is to express negatively. You can remove the influences, but it must be the child's will to change, and there must be a conscious decision to do so. This is why it is imperative that the ego be guided and directed to express its higher nature as a child.

The greatest masters that walked this plane were born to parents who disciplined their children, ever guiding them onward and upward to fulfill their own unique purpose for being. They understood the necessity of self-control and self-discipline, and the pitfalls of allowing a child to run amuck without boundaries or a clear understanding of what is acceptable and what is not. At an early age they learned self-control and self-discipline, which made it possible to focus on, and surrender to, the God within them. A rebellious, undisciplined ego with no self-control is of no use to spirit or humanity.

Another point concerning the rearing of children is "smother love." This often creates a dependent child with expectations that are often unfulfilled later in life. Some parents hover over children, doing everything for them, allowing them no private time or alone time. These children often become very demanding, dependent and insecure. Children need alone time. They need to be challenged to figure some things out by themselves, and given the opportunity and responsibility to do some things on their own. This presses the brain to open and enhances creativity. It also makes them more independent and secure.

The next issue I would like to address is what to do when a child is not acting constructively, lovingly or joyously. Let us first address the tantrum. When a child is acting unreasonably, you cannot reason with him. You can, however, give him a clear choice either to discontinue his behavior and communicate with you, or to go to a place where he will not trespass on your rights or the rights of others to peace and harmony. If he chooses the first time to discontinue his tantrum, you have worked a miracle.

Should he choose to continue the tantrum (and most of them do), your next step is to remove him, or have him remove himself, to his room or another place that does not interfere with the rights of others. Acquiescing to his demands, in any way, is sure to bring you more and grander tantrums. This includes bribes for good behavior. At this point it would be wise to call upon the child's higher self and/or your own higher self and clear any unseen negative influences.

When the child is done with the tantrum and has gained control, communicate with him. Do not tell him he is bad. Tell him his behavior is unacceptable, why it is unacceptable and what is acceptable. Communication is very important and it is equally important not to condemn the child by telling him that he is bad or stupid. Address the behavior

When do you begin to discipline children? Obviously not when they're babies. The only way a baby can make its needs known is by crying. As they get older, it is time to wean them of this behavior. A good rule of thumb as to when it is time to discipline a child is: If they are old enough to jump up and down and throw a tantrum, then they are old enough to discipline. The greatest of all challenges are the teenagers, otherwise known as the "system busters." They often question and rebel, which is natural. They are trying to establish their own identity, and it is a very awkward age.

They are no longer a boy or girl, yet they are neither a man nor woman. They want to be in charge of everything, yet they do not quite have the wisdom from experience. In Western society they often do not even know what it is to be a man or woman because there are no rites of passage. The archetypes given to them are often very unhealthy images, many of which dishonor one sex or the other. Many also do not have a clue as to what is expected of them as young adults. It is very important that these rites of passage be reinstated not with barbaric and painful rituals, but with love, understanding and compassion. Make a wonderful ceremony out of it.

There are universal principles that are not being taught in the home or in the schools. They are also mixed in with a lot of dogma and superstitious beliefs in many religious institutions. These universal principles and laws are necessary for a healthy civilization. The separation of church and state often keeps these principles from being taught. This is mainly because of the religious organizations wanting to add their images, codes and doctrines to the universal principles. They have nothing to do with religion and everything to do with life. The action/reaction principle, the laws of accountability and responsibility, the "interconnectedness" and strong reverence for all life, the principles of growth, abundance, balance, giving and receiving, equality, etc., are all necessary understandings for a healthy society. These need to be taught in the homes and in the schools.

Children are a precious gift, honored throughout the universe. They are your future. They are given to parents to guide and direct to fulfillment of the child's own unique soul's purpose for being. This purpose is always to express lovingly, joyously, abundantly and constructively, honoring the rights of others. To parents, I give my utmost respect and loving support in your undertaking of one of the most rewarding, loving, joyous and sometimes trying experiences this human adventure has to offer—the parenting of masters.

The Use of Drugs

I would like to begin this dissertation by telling you that I have not come to condemn or condone drugs. It is my desire to give information that will allow individuals to make an informed, conscious choice as to whether they will partake of drugs.

There are several reasons why one may choose to use drugs. One of the main reasons is the failure of today's society to bring love, joy and peace to the individual. Many use drugs to escape from an unfulfilled relationship or job. Alcohol, a joint, cocaine or heroin—they are all forms of escape. There are those who cannot find joy without a drug. Some people are very sensitive and are unable to shield themselves from the psychic turbulence of a hostile environment. In this instance, drugs are used to numb, or desensitize, as a means of protection. Another reason for using drugs is to have a spiritual experience and explore other planes and dimensions. A few choose drugs simply because it is fashionable and they are uninformed.

It would not be fair of me to ignore the fact that drugs indeed do have consequences. The short-term gain is not worth the long-term effect. Drugs can physically damage the body. The problems you seek to escape from are always there when you return. The highs you experience through drugs are a by-product of the death of your brain cells. Your brain is a receiver and the more one partakes of drugs, the more one damages his receiver and the ability to attune to the higher, more expanded consciousness (joy). The mind does not reside within the body. It takes a fully operational brain to receive the great mind of the great God that surrounds the body. Escape is not the answer. Facing your problems, healing them, or making the necessary adjustments to remove yourself from a situation that is taking you from your joy is far more productive.

As for using drugs for a spiritual experience, there are safe and natural techniques to attain the same goals. It is time for churches to expand and offer these techniques. They have been known in the East for over three thousand years. When one uses drugs for a spiritual experience, they are often blasted into realms where they cannot operate. They do not yet have the tools or the foundation. Can you imagine being filled with repressed fear, guilt or anger and entering a realm where your thoughts manifest instantly?

It could be a hellish experience—one over which you have no control because you are under the control of the drug. This information can be very disquieting for those of you who have partaken of drugs. It is not written to diminish your joy. It is written in love, to give you a true picture so that you can choose knowingly and fully informed. You are greatly loved, unconditionally, no matter what your choice. Those who have damaged their bodies can still open enough of the brain to become enlightened.

Mystery Schools

The mainstream schools of today base the greater portion of their curriculum on recycled ignorance. They do not inspire great, free-thinking minds. What they do inspire is conformity to limited mind. Children are programmed to compete, conform, obey and follow the rules and regulations of social consciousness—which is limited mind. They are not taught that they are creators of their destiny. They are not taught about the omnipresent, omniscient and omnipotent life force, of which they are a part. They are not taught about the great kinship of all life. They are not taught the principles of light or the divine science of manifestation and creation.

Children are searching for an identity. They are given the limitations passed down by teachers, generation after generation. They are taught how to compete, consume, conform, produce and live their lives subject to mass and the orders and edicts of others. Rather than teaching them that they are lords over mass, that consciousness creates reality and that within them resides a unique, loving, joyous, powerful manifesting God who cherishes life in all forms, they are instead taught about reactionary mind, subject to the world in which they live and those who control and manipulate it. They are molded, herded like cattle, infused and programmed with the attitudes and emotions of social consciousness.

Social consciousness is limited, reactionary mind. It is riddled with fear, unworthiness, confusion, limiting mental concepts, disease, false beliefs and wrong conclusions from past experience. When one projects a limiting mental concept or lower vibrational attitude or emotion into the outer world, it manifests and becomes a fact. In other words, it is real, tangible. It is then taught as a fact of life, yet it is only a manifestation of limited mind. Individually and collectively, humanity has been embracing lower vibrational attitudes and emotions, as well as limiting mental concepts and wrong conclusions from past experiences, and manifesting them in the outer world.

This is why the Mystery Schools are manifesting on your plane, Earth.

They are here to remind humanity that within them resides a unique, loving, joyous and powerful manifesting God. They are here to teach humanity that consciousness creates reality. Most importantly, they are here to awaken the forgotten Gods, dissolve the lower vibrational attitudes and emotions, heal their physical counterparts, and clean up the consciousness of this plane. They are here to establish the individual God, the Christ consciousness within each individual. They are also here to create a better world for future generations.

The only true and everlasting healing occurs from healing individual and collective consciousness, and humanity must take responsibility for this.

The mystery schools are here to teach you how. It is your choice as to when. In determining when, I would suggest taking a long, hard look at your present individual and collective consciousness, its physical manifestations and the future reactions. There is no time like the present. I highly recommend supporting these schools. They are a gift, and if accepted and allowed, they will change the course of humanity and the Earth (which are in dire need of redirection).

Monkey Mind

I wish to speak of a process that has enslaved humankind: the "monkey mind." It is consciousness run amuck, sometimes in endless circles, chasing its tail. It does not express in the moment. Rather, it builds cases against fictitious enemies, and it projects its fears and judgments into the outer world, avoiding responsibility for its own attitudes and emotions.

There are many processes within the monkey mind. We will address a few to help identify them. This will help you catch yourself, stop the process, and heal the attitudes and emotions without projecting them onto the outer world. Everything originates in mind. By bringing everything back into the mind, one can gain dominion over and heal any negative experience. To gain dominion over the world one must first gain dominion over the mind.

When you have a negative interaction with another person and, due to fear or unworthiness, you do not find the self-authority to express your feelings or take action, the negative experience becomes stuffed within self. The monkey mind then takes over. It goes back in time to build a case to justify the right to express. It also starts projecting ahead, and it sets up future events to add to the case. When the monkey mind has found sufficient grounds within self to express, it waits for an opening or event to unload.

The next time something happens that bears any resemblance whatsoever to your case, the flood gates open and a wave of unexpressed or repressed emotions engulf whatever or whomever triggered the response. Those caught in the wave are usually left dumbfounded, covered with the debris of a lifetime of your unexpressed fear, anger and resentment. They cannot for the life of them understand why a trivial (so it seemed to them) event or statement was met with such ferocity.

Unless the victim is a highly evolved being, his monkey mind will either start building a case in retaliation, or project it onto someone else. This creates an endless circle and perpetuates problems rather than healing them. Projecting our fears, anger or judgments onto the outer world creates just that—a fearful, angry, judgmental outer world.

Owning one's fears, anger, lower vibrational attitudes, emotions and wrong conclusions from past experience gives one the power to change and heal them. It is a matter of taking full responsibility for our attitudes, emotions and their physical counterparts.

Let me describe another trait of the monkey mind. When one finds his own life dull, boring or lacking purpose, his purpose becomes the lives of others. He measures others against his standards and images. When others do not meet those standards, he judges them and may condemn them or set out to fix them. God knows what would happen if he simply allowed them and got on with his own life.

Many of these fixers are, in reality, controllers and manipulators. Because of fear, they create boxes, standards and measures, and then try to jam unique Gods with unique destinies into their boxes. They also force unlimited Gods to conform to these standards and measures. Your present-day society is built by monkey minds. It stifles creativity and is stagnant and enslaving. Monkey minds that are seemingly "just trying to help" are quite perplexed when their loved ones rebel or lash out ferociously against all logic. It is because it is not logical to bind or constrict a creative, evolving, loving, joyous God.

Some have been very successful at imposing their will on others. The consequence is that they have given up their own life or unique purpose. They are busy living and controlling everyone else's lives. Those under their yoke have also become the walking dead, because the greater majority have also given up their own unique purpose and acquiesced to the will of another.

Your monkey mind has been programmed to be a consumer, to buy all that is fashionable for the reward of sex or prestige and eventually for your place of power, position and security. Sound familiar? How about a commercial that says, "The following message of silence is brought to you by the unique God within you. Take time to realize what truly brings you joy, what you want out of life, what your own unique purpose for incarnating is. This message will be free of all images, the desires of society, family and friends, and you do not have to follow any path or be anything other than yourself, to have sex or gain the love and acceptance of God. This station fully supports you in following your own unique purpose. This commercial will play again and again to remind you to follow your bliss when all others demand that you take responsibility for theirs."

There is a station constantly transmitting this message. It is beyond the monkey mind. You must be still and quiet to hear it. All you have to do is turn your receiver to station C. H. R. I. S. T. 3200 FM, which stands for "Feel Me." It is constantly transmitting unconditional love, healing, and guidance from within.

A third aspect of the monkey mind is polarity thinking. Everything is either good or evil, rather than just being as it is. Did you know that everything is God and that without God, nothing exists? It is fear that demand judgment, and it is judgment that seemingly separates humans from God. It was the knowledge of good and evil, the "forbidden fruit," that caused man to first judge himself unworthy. Unworthiness led to guilt and fear. Consciousness creates reality. Duality thinking creates the duality world, the illusionary world of polarities. Everything 'is' and the 'is' is God. Before entering into duality or polarity thinking, tell yourself it is neither good nor evil, it just is. This will expand your consciousness and propel you forward into oneness with omnipresent, omnipotent and omniscient mind, God.

The fourth and last aspect of monkey mind we wish to address is your 'off' button. Whenever you are taken beyond your comfort zone, you turn off. Your brain shuts down. You may go on holiday and find yourself drifting off in a fantasy, an illusion, or a convenient image or distraction. This is your alter ego's way of staying in control.

Whenever something rattles your cage (a small cage at that, built by a fearful alter ego), you click off, switch channels and go somewhere else. Another time, another place, usually somewhere in the past. That is because the past is known and safe. Why not dare to enter the unknown? Explore a greater reality, a more expanded consciousness. If you really need to go somewhere, at least go forward. It is an inherent trait of the monkey mind to deny, discredit or attack anything that upsets its accepted reality, invokes, change or disrupts a lifestyle—even if that lifestyle is harmful to self, humanity or nature.

Rather than heed the words of prophets to change, humanity has found it simpler to chastise, discredit, ignore or kill the prophet. It has been done for eons.

It is wise to learn to stay focused and centered on love. Allow and yourself and the opposite sex would be reflected back to you along with any unhealed or unresolved issues.

This is why it is more productive to turn inward and clear the wounds, traumas and wrong conclusions from past experiences before you go searching for your soul mate. Another twist to the soul mate story is once you have met, no one else will do. You may find a comfort zone in another, yet it will lack the intensity and there will always be something missing. There may be no logical reason for you to have this relentless desire to be together, and there may be a million reasons why you shouldn't. When is love logical? It is a divine and holy love created by your very God-self wanting to unite with self. It is awesome, powerful, intense and sometimes a bit scary. It can ignite a flame of love beyond imagination and it can move mountains.

The closer you are to becoming one with the pure, unconditionally loving, joyous God within, the better chance you have of attracting your soul mate or someone of like mind. This brings us back to relationships. Each relationship is unique. For those who have ended a relationship, I will not tell you it will ever be the same, because it won't. It was a unique experience. However, I will tell you that you will love again, possibly the same person.

In order to experience a whole universe of uniqueness, you must let go of the past. It was a gift and it cannot be recreated, yet, believe it or not, there is always more. More love, more joy and another unique God to experience. Your eternal self has had millions of relationships, and odds are you will have millions more.

Clinging to the past and trying to recreate an experience by projecting the past on a new experience with a new, unique individual is not only an injustice to that individual, it is an injustice to yourself. You are separating yourself from all the new experiences life has to offer. When one is not appreciated for her own uniqueness, she often leaves. In order to experience the totality of any new relationship, there must be a letting go of the past, all preconceived ideas, all expectations and all the little boxes you created.

You both must be true to yourselves. When you come together, it must be as two unique, sovereign Gods. If there is a split, you must separate as two unique, sovereign Gods. Many partners are bound by fear—fear of losing favor in the eyes of God, fear of violating the enslaving human-made codes and doctrines of the church, fear of judgments of family and society, fear of lack, fear of loss of support, fear of being alone, or fears of many other kinds. Many are bound by 'shoulds' and guilt. These partners are not bound by love. They are bound by fear. They are so entangled with one another and are clinging so desperately to each other that they have forgotten self completely. If you were to look upon these relationships from another level, you would see so many psychic bonds and controlling, manipulating patterns, you would wonder how free will has any room to operate.

Whenever you acquiesce to the will of another, you diminish your light. Your soul is the source of your light. You must be free to find your divine purpose and follow your soul's desire—despite the whole of the world. If it is your divine purpose and your soul's desire to enter into a relationship, by all means do so, but stay in the moment. Do not spin webs or enter contractual agreements that enslave and bind you and your partner with future tears.

It may be your soul's desire to leave in the next moment. There are no accidents in the universe. People come together for various reasons. Some relationships are for the sole purpose of healing or fulfilling a commitment made on another level. When healing is accomplished or the commitment fulfilled, it is spiritually acceptable to move on to your next lesson or commitment. Limiting yourself to a relationship that diminishes your joy serves no purpose for you or the one you are with. What it does do is enable you to hold onto your fears, beliefs and limitations rather than addressing and healing them. You all have a right to love, joy and freedom, as well as the right to move in and out of relationships. We can no longer demand that others take responsibility for our attitudes, emotions or support. Within each man and woman lies a powerful manifesting God.

Another drama played out in relationships is the endless search for Mr. Right or Mrs. Right—you know, the one who is going to rescue you, solve all of your problems, or provide everything lacking within self. Many dive into one relationship after another with all of their projections and needs. When the infatuation is over and the curiosity is satisfied, what they are left with is self—the same incomplete self that was searching in the first place for love, acceptance and joy outside self. These individuals do not understand why they are unhappy and unfulfilled. They wonder what is wrong with the relationship. Rather than taking responsibility for their own consciousness that creates their reality, they instead blame their lover for their unhappiness—or move onto another lover, and another, and another. They cannot run from their consciousness. Until they deal with their own consciousness, they will recreate the same unhappy experiences. It will just be another face, another place, another time.

Many of these experiences are replicas of childhood experiences. A lot of inner child healing work is presently underway. Many are looking for a relationship with their father or mother in a new partner.

These relationships are for the purpose of healing the past. One attracts a person with the same patterns that wounded them as a child. Ideally, the childhood experience is recreated, allowing the person an opportunity to heal old wounds. However, many become victims and fall into blame, rather than healing their own consciousness and self-created reality. Thus, the experience will only be recreated later in life, over and over again until it is healed.

In dealing with these issues, whether they are abuse, abandonment or some other experience, it is wise to see yourself as a billionaire looking at a penny. Many spend their entire lives grieving over a lost penny when they are indeed billionaires. Although a wound must be addressed and healed, it is a very small part in a grand play that has gone on since eternity. You need not give it so much power or attention. Allow a grander Self to heal and have dominion over the situation.

One of the greatest of all tips we can offer concerning relationships is to establish an intimate relationship with your own God self before trying to establish one with others. This will carry you through the trials and tribulations of any relationship, as well as allow you to love others unconditionally on a much grander scale. It will also allow you to bond because it is your soul's desire and not because you are needy, insecure or programmed by society or alter ego.

Your God self's love and acceptance is steadfast, unconditional and beyond measure. It is something you can always depend on especially when others are unloving or anticipating.

Your God self will carry you through the acceleration and the vibrational lifting and healing processes concerning relationships. All unresolved issues and inequalities in relationships and in society will come forward to be resolved and healed. The lifting will come in cycles and will increase in intensity. Each individual will have a choice. On the one side is fear: projecting, blaming, controlling and manipulating. On the other side is unconditional love and allowing. Higher consciousness and energy is lifting and empowering each individual to fulfill his own unique purpose for being.

Commit to love. Make love your lover. Commit to your own healing process. Commit to supporting others in their healing process. Most of all, commit to your own God self and your own soul's purpose for being. And in doing so, perhaps you will draw to yourself someone of like mind. Unite in freedom. Know the unique God within your partner as well as yourself. And give free will a little room to operate. Be together because you want to, because it is your soul's desire, because it brings you joy.

Just Friends

I wish to bring an understanding to humanity. It is from a civilization that overcame its aggressive, competitive and warring behavior by making a collective agreement to never go beneath the level of friendship. Before entering any relationship they agree to always be friends. If it is the soul's desire of an individual to move apart or explore another reality, it is discussed openly and honestly.

In the civilization of which I speak, the most honored relationship is friendship. If, between individuals, a mutual desire to explore a more intimate relationship exists, it is done with the understanding that they will always come back to being friends. This is also done in business relationships. In a business venture, decisions made are always in the highest and best interest of all concerned—including the whole of life. Each player is aware of exactly what is expected from him.

If the soul's desire of an individual is to change jobs or partners, there is a network that allows this to happen. It happens smoothly, with the blessings of all concerned. These people are not enslaved by their jobs or their relationships. They live abundant lives where each individual is doing what brings her joy. They are sovereign, honest and of the utmost integrity. They are not bound by the societal and religious limitations and moral judgments found on your plane. They are not controlled or manipulated into continuing in jobs or relationships that have lost their flavor. Their decisions are not made under the fear of loss or penalty. They have mastered their insecurities. All decisions are based on love.

Children are one of their most cherished possessions, and they are always taken care of. Their system provides for children. Each child is the child of the civilization. Parents are beyond the beliefs of duality and separation. They do not own their children. They understand that there is truly one Father and one Mother in the Universe and that they are expressing as an aspect of the Father-Mother God. Children are free to explore many fathers and many mothers, and they are more secure for it.

Now, I wish to answer a few questions.... Do they bond together for a lifetime? They do. Do they separate when it is their souls' desire? They do. Do they love and cherish their children? They do. Are they beyond jealousy? They are. They realize a soul is owned by God and by itself.

Do others also raise their children? They do. Do the children suffer from the diversity of parents? They don't, for it is accepted by society, and children are even more secure because there is never a separation. The new relationship honors the old, and everyone remains friends. It is not a burden to accept children into your lives—it is an honor. The new parent always is grateful for the gift of the former parent, though the child is never owned. Parents are always free to be with their children, and the details are always worked out graciously, to the highest and best good of all concerned.

The civilization of which I speak is of the same seed as humanity. They are a little further along in their evolution, yet it is the destiny of humanity to follow in their footsteps. They are a civilization of honest and sincere people of the highest integrity. They have enjoyed a peaceful, harmonious existence for thousands of years, and they are free to this day to follow their hearts' desires. They have prospered and advanced spiritually and technologically to become what humanity can only dream of, yet everything begins with a dream. There is one thing you can always depend upon. They will always be your friends. They have learned that to stifle or constrict a loving, joyous God who is ever seeking new and unique ways of expressing is to kill them. Because of their nature, they live to an average age of eight hundred years. Why? Because they truly live life as a loving, joyous and bold adventure, and they are free and supported in doing so.

Love & Forgiveness

One of the most powerful sayings of all time is, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Another rendition of this saying is, "Father, forgive them, for they do not know who they are, who you are, or what God is."

There is a lot of talk about dysfunctional families, yet let us expand our understanding to encompass a dysfunctional planet. If your world is not honoring each individual as a unique expression of God, and if your world does not behave as if the God in all life matters, it is dysfunctional. If everyone knew they were a God, residing among other Gods, and that God in its most unlimited understanding is pure unconditional love and joy residing within the totality of life, imagine what this plane would become. It is the destiny of this plane to return to Eden and to lift into the Christ vibration, yet between now and then, you have a lot of forgiving to do.

Most humans are no longer a reflection of the loving, joyous, powerful manifesting God or of the true image in which they were created. There are very few examples, or mirrors, of this truth. Humanity has strayed greatly from this truth, due to fear, unworthiness and wrong conclusions from past experience. The discrepancy differs with the individual and is directly proportional to the environments they have experienced. The environments and experiences are not limited to one lifetime, one planet, one plane or one dimension. It is the totality of all experience that creates the consciousness of the individual. *

All experience is recorded in the soul as feelings. These feelings are often unconsciously acted upon. Fear, ignorance and wrong conclusions from past experience often govern the actions of many from deeper levels within self, unaware to their conscious minds. They truly do not know what they do or why they do it. They have become wounded and confused by negative experience. Some experiences have settled into the soul as wisdom. They are finished business, because the individual has gained the right conclusion from the experience.

Healing comes through understanding. Understanding allows one to forgive, release and no longer be affected by negative experiences. There is an omnipresent, omnipotent and omniscient being within everyone.

It can call the body forward to the whole and healthy now. It can dissolve fear, unworthiness and all lower vibrational attitudes, emotions and wrong conclusions from past experience. It can reinstate you as the whole and healthy, immaculate, loving, joyous God—the true image and likeness in which you were created. The first step is desire. You have to want it. The second is to realize that you are not who you think you are. When this is done, you will also realize that everyone else is not who you think they are.

Behind every mask lies a loving, joyous and powerful manifesting God—no matter what you think is real or what you have based your judgments on. No matter what fantasy or drama is unfolding before your eyes, behind every mask is God. They may not know they are God, yet is it not time to remind them? Is it not time to awaken to the fact that you are indeed Gods? Awaken from the dream. Is it not time to step out of the dramas and fantasies and remember?

Forgive yourself for forgetting and not seeing beyond the mask. Forgive yourself for falsely identifying with the dramas and fantasies. Forgive your parents, friends and families for forgetting who they truly are and for getting caught up and lost in the dream. Forgive them for not acknowledging who you truly are and for not being the mirror of the God within you. Forgive the overzealous men and their idols, who truly believe they are serving God. Forgive the world for forgetting, for not acknowledging and mirroring the fact that you are indeed God. Keep forgiving until you are empty of all fear, anger, blame, guilt, sadness, judgment, condemnation, separation and need for revenge.

Have compassion for all those who have become wounded and confused on their journey through life. No longer allow yourself to be fooled by the masks—yours or theirs. Awaken and remember your origin: a loving, joyous, powerful, manifesting God born of the original light from which nothing was withheld. It would also be wise to forgive God—who loved you unconditionally throughout all of your chosen dramas and fantasies. It is a God who has never abandoned you, but allowed you, honoring a divine gift called free will, and is a God to be found within you, all around you, wherever there is life.

A Note to the Atheist

I wish to impart to you a blessing, regardless of your truth. You are loved unconditionally, for love is the life force that allows you to be.

If I had chosen your path in my expression as Ezekiel, I would have had much less to unlearn. My soul's desire was to live in the forest and find God through nature. Unfortunately, I allowed myself to be ensnared by the teachings of unenlightened men. Do not judge yourself for not accepting the graven images of others. Man has created God in his image. That is why there are so many images, codes, doctrines and rituals belonging to these images.

It is a wise choice not to become ensnared in the confusion and the many images of men. It is unwise to continue to separate yourself from a God who truly loves you unconditionally. The pure unconditional love and joy of the Father resides within you. Only there is it to be found. There are pearls in all teachings. Let love, joy and unity be your tools for discernment. Disregard the shells of ignorance. You will never find the pearl until you crack the shell. I have seen more unconditional love and compassion in the atheist than in those who profess to be spiritual.

When one adheres to a rigid code or doctrine, one has a proclivity to judge and condemn those who do not. This love is conditional and limited, for it cannot love or allow anything outside of its discipline. This is a trap. Be thankful if you have avoided it. Love yourself as you are loved by the Father, and allow others their truths. In doing so you will become the example.

It is loving God with all your heart that opens the door to oneness with the totality of life. In doing so, the love of God will flow through you to the rest of the world. This is a simple truth that humans have complicated. Whether you love God or not, you are greatly loved, yet you and only you can open the door. There are no conditions, no codes, no prerequisites. There is only love. That, dear brothers and sisters, is an infinite, ongoing truth—despite what humans have made of it.

Right to Joy

You all have the right to joy. You have the right to live the most loving, joyous, abundant life imaginable. If anyone tells you differently, they are enslavers. They are trespassing on your divine right to free will and self-determination. The only thing you should do is that which brings you joy. God is bliss, and when you are following your bliss, you are following God. All that God asks of you is that you be happy. The unconditional love of God supports you in whatever makes you happy.

A question seldom asked is, "Why am I not happy?" It would also be wise to ask "What do I truly want? What is my innermost desire?" The most empowering thing to do is to find the courage to live your soul's desire despite the whole of the world. The best contribution anyone can make is to live a thoroughly happy and joyous life. Become an example of that life, so that others may follow your lead. Do not look to others for acceptance or approval. Accept and approve of yourself. God has accepted you and approves of you, for the love of God is unconditional. Is that not enough? You are always okay with God. You can use that as your mantra when you are not okay with others. Your innermost desires are God's desires, and God is love.

God is also freedom. It is not God's plan that you live your life for others. Following your bliss will include others, yet do not become enslaved by the "shoulds" of family, or society or by another's picture of reality. You have been told what you should be, what you should do, what you should wear, what you should eat, and when you should do all of these things. Has anyone told you that you should do what makes you happy, and then supported you totally in that role? I am and I will, for I love you as God loves you. Dispense with the "shoulds" and "have to's." Take the time to find yourself. Get in touch with your innermost desires, and find the courage to live them. Be happy, and be a blessing to life.

Simplicity

We cannot expound enough upon the benefits of simplicity. Have you ever wondered why simple people often have glowing eyes and beautiful smiles? Some of the most impoverished people experience more joy than those with the greatest of kingdoms. Have you ever wondered what their secret is? It is quite simple. They realize that material objects possess no joy. They also realize that joy is an inward experience, and they do not look for their joy in the transitory, ever-changing outer world. Their kingdom, love and joy are within—changeless and safe from an ever-changing outer world. They have not been hypnotized by the “American Dream,” and though many own material objects, they are not owned by the objects. Their self-worth is independent of their material acquisitions in the outer world. Their love, joy and self-worth are changeless, operational, intact and within. That is why they have glowing eyes and beautiful smiles.

Fantasies, Fables & Parables

The Trapping of Angels

In a time before time, there was an angel named Poseffini. She was a manifestation of pure love and joy. She was as free as the wind, and she followed her joy wherever it led. She never realized the joy was within her. Whoever came within her aura was filled with love and joy. They would often do a little dance, a kind deed or hug the closest friend. Often one would see someone hugging a tree in her presence. Many could not perceive her, yet her presence would cause them to do the oddest things.

All Poseffini saw was the love and joy reflected back to her by all that she experienced. She lived in a realm of light with a myriad of other forms expressing in light bodies. It was a realm where dreams manifest instantly. It was far from boring, for they would interact with each other's dreams. There was always something to do.

The Spirit of the Moon delighted in Poseffini's adventures. She would often send a moonbeam for Poseffini to ride on to other planes and dimensions. She brought her love and joy to far away places many have not even dreamed of.

Poseffini was grateful for all her adventures, and she wanted to express her gratitude to whomever was sending the wonderful beams that guided her. That thought alone created the manifestation of Poseffini standing in front of a beautiful woman with long silken robes. The beautiful woman was of spirit. The stars could be seen through her as she drifted in the heavens. Poseffini was overwhelmed by the beauty and grace of the Spirit of the Moon, as well as by the love and joy emanating from her being. Poseffini had never felt such a nurturing essence.

The Spirit spoke in a warm and gentle voice, “Poseffini, my dearest Poseffini, you have brought me so much joy. I have been with you in all your adventures. I have also shared in the love and joy you brought to others. What you have not realized is that the love and joy you experience is the universe reflecting back to you your own love and joy. You came to thank me for your adventures, yet it is I who wish to

* / thank you for sharing them with me. I wish for you to think of me as your equal. Do not place me above yourself, for that only diminishes your own light. What you see in me is within you, for you could not recognize it if it wasn't within self. I wish for you to see me as a friend to share in your love and light."

This dissolved all barriers between Poseffini and the Spirit of the Moon. They spent hours, which were months, even years, in other dimensions, reminiscing about adventures and experiences they had shared. This created a bond of familiarity that would always be with them. Poseffini asked the Spirit about a planet she passed on the way to the moon. It was emerald green and looked enticing. Poseffini saw sadness in the face of the Spirit of the Moon. The Spirit paused for a few moments and spoke, "The planet you passed is known as Earth. It is the plane of demonstration. It is where an angel goes to experience mass, the lowest vibration of God. To understand the totality of God, one must experience this plane. Unfortunately, many have become entrapped by it."

Poseffini didn't understand. She wondered how mass could entrap a spirit. She could flow right through mass, and it would be impossible for anything to hold her against her will. The Spirit spoke, "In order to experience mass, a spirit must choose to become flesh. This is where the entrapment occurs. The physical body is equipped with five senses, and it vibrates at the same level as mass. Without it you could not truly experience mass, for you would flow right through it. As spirit you can see and feel the emanations of mass, yet you cannot hold it in your arms, touch it, smell it or hear it.

"Spirit communicates through thought and, though spirit can see, it cannot truly experience creation on the level of mass without a physical body equipped with the five senses—a body of the same vibration as mass."

"The physical body is rich in cellular memory. It has stored in its cells generations of experiences that were embraced emotionally. This is what allows it to adapt to its environment and evolve, making any necessary adjustments to continue. Recorded within the body is fear and pain. When an angel enters a physical body, emotions stored in the body become intermixed with the angel's own emotions. This lowers an angel's vibration. Even when the body dies, the spirit often carries with it the lower vibrational attitudes and emotions. This ties the spirit to the Earth and keeps it on the wheel of life, to be born again and again."

Poseffini was confused. She didn't understand fear and pain because she had never experienced them. Then the Spirit spoke of death, she was really thrown for a loop. She didn't understand how consciousness or light could die. The Spirit felt her confusion and spoke, "Poseffini, fear and pain are emotions that were necessary for the physical body to continue. Fear came from pain. Pain was a feeling necessary to bring attention to an area of the body that had been injured. Pain was a great teacher. It often saved the body from injury. Fear and pain kept the body out of harm's way. Pain in the belly often kept a body from poisoning itself. Fear of pain was the first fear. Humanity has been very creative with fear, and now fear has a myriad of forms."

"As for death, you are right in your understanding of the nature of spirit. Spirit never dies. Many on Earth identify with the body. When the body is no longer able to function, the spirit removes itself. This brings grief and sadness to those it leaves behind, who still identify with the body as the identity of the loved one. The spirit is usually observing this in a light body, yet it cannot console those who are grieving, for it cannot be seen. Spirit can be felt, but those left behind are too busy feeling grief and sadness. Even the physical body never dies. It is composed of atoms. The very atom itself has life, and when the spirit leaves the body, the atoms merely disperse. Spirit is and always will be. What many grieve over is a picture painted by a spirit that chose to inhabit it. If those in mourning would send a ray of love and joy to the spirit that left the painting, that spirit would feel their presence and know they are all right.

"I feel your next question. How does Spirit forget? To enter a physical body, spirit merges with the light of one of the parents. The spirit often chooses someone they are familiar with. When the child is born, the spirit enters the body. This can happen at birth or even months later. Upon entering the body, the spirit forgets its identity. It takes on a 'personality' that is a combination of the spirit and memory stored within the body. The personality is not conscious of its past, yet the past is still within it, stored as feelings."

Poseffini then understood how angels are entrapped, but she still lacked the experience to give her a complete understanding. Curiosity was the driving force that guided her into all of her adventures. At this point, Poseffini was fearless, for she had no reason to fear anything. After hearing the story of Earth, she was compelled to experience that plane and all it had to offer. She knew the power of love and joy, and that they would never abandon her.

The Spirit, being one with her thoughts, spoke, "My dearest Poseffini, I feel your desire. Your love, joy and freedom of spirit is in great need on Earth. You will forget who you are upon entering the myriad of ambassadors from other planes, other dimensions and other universes. The topic of the day was Earth. There was a heated debate as to whether to risk allowing the co-creating experiment of free will and powerful emotions to continue or to wipe the slate clean and start over with new seed.

To many this action-reaction world, known as the plane of demonstration, where consciousness creates reality, was a mistake that if not erased would leak out into the rest of the universe. They found the actions of the people of Earth disgusting and intolerable. They cited case after case of warlike behavior, unbridled greed and decadence. They saw a civilization bent upon not only destroying itself, but also the very platform for life upon which they resided. They were also very concerned with the rapid growth and misuse of technology that was outpacing the evolution of spirituality and the acceptance of basic universal principles.

Humanity, with its nuclear experimentation, was fragmenting the Earth's crust and disrupting the very fabric of space, creating a ripple effect felt throughout the universe. They believed the experiment known as Earth was a grand failure and must be terminated before it did any more damage, or spread out into the rest of the universe. Unfortunately they had a very good case backed by enormous evidence.

There was another group, many of which had ascended from Earth as masters, saints and avatars along with other advanced beings, who pleaded on the behalf of humanity and the Earth. There were advanced beings who came from other planes, dimensions and galaxies, and they gave compassionate pleas citing their own ancient history where they, too, were once warlike, lusting for power and money at the expense of their people and their planet. They also had their decadent factions. They came very close to completely annihilating themselves, yet they crossed that threshold, leaving it far behind in their evolution. Love is now the manifesting force behind all creation, and their technology is a reflection of their spirituality.

The masters who ascended from the Earth also pleaded on behalf of those who have dedicated their lives in service to God, humanity and the Earth, many of who were also on the threshold of ascension. "Their efforts must not be in vain, nor go unrewarded. We cannot abandon them. What they need is more time and some divine intervention on all our parts, along with a little more patience honoring their evolutionary process." The debate continued for days in time as we know it, and, as each side spoke, holograms appeared high in the center of the great hall providing visual historical evidence to defend their positions. After the final closing statements, there was a long silence followed by an adjournment.

The meeting reconvened as the head of the consortium entered the hall and took his position along with the twelve other panel members. As the murmuring of the crowd diminished, the head of the consortium rose and began to speak. He was very tall and majestic with long golden hair and a beard to match, which flowed into his golden white robes. His body was not physical as we know it. It consisted of magnetized light for the convenience of those who needed a focal point, yet, in truth, he was pure consciousness that expanded into infinity.

He began by informing the consortium that they had reached a decision concerning the destiny of Earth and all its inhabitants. He also informed them that all that has transpired has been taken into account, and he expressed great admiration for all who have spoken. "The points have well been made, and we are very concerned about Earth's destiny. We have watched other civilizations transcend their baser nature and evolve into the grandeur of what now sits among us. We have watched others annihilate themselves, turning their planets into desolate wastelands, some of which exploded and are now meteors and asteroids. They could not overcome their unbridled greed and lust for power. They failed to realize the ultimate power of the universe, the eternal everlasting power of love, the manifesting force behind all creation. Love always empowers, never overpowers, and always acts in the highest and best good of all life for where there is life, there is God.

"Many of these souls are residing upon the Earth as we speak. They have been given a second chance to utilize the wisdom gained from the past and to once again choose. The Earth is at a turning point where all must choose. The awakening and healing of humanity and the Earth is no longer optional. A great light shall come upon the Earth. It will be known as the quickening.

"Those who choose love to be the manifesting force behind all creation will be exalted. Those who choose to continue in their againstness, unbridled greed and lust for power at the expense of humanity will suffer the reactions to their actions straight away. All lower vibrational attitudes and emotions and their physical counterparts will be lifted, healed, and in some cases, the temples will fall. The divine right to free will and self-determination shall still be honored. Each individual will be at his own hand held accountable for his own choices. This special dispensation of energy will be a blessing to some and an enemy to others who resist the light

Commitment, Desire & Dedication

Let us begin with desire. Desire is the key that opens all doors. You cannot make the necessary commitment unless the desire is present. The commitment is relative to the desire. You cannot force yourself, for that diminishes your joy. When one truly desires something, he will commit to whatever is necessary to attain it. The degree of success is relative to the degree of commitment. If you truly desire oneness with spirit, it takes strong commitment and dedication to meditation.

It is written: "Be still and know ye are God." Meditation allows this. It dissolves all that which separates you from the one mind that is God. It dissolves all fear, unworthiness, false beliefs and the attitudes and emotions that conflict with the truth of your being. Pure, unconditional love and joy resides within you. It is the truth of your being, and meditation allows you to access this truth.

It is also written: "The light that dwells within all men is the light of God." Calling this light forward and becoming one with it creates union. This union is called the Christ, Emmanuel, or God within us. In reality, you are only a channel for God. For God to work through you, there must be a clearing away of all that is out of alignment with the mind of God. Meditation assists you in doing this. As spirit flows through you, it will clear away that which is out of alignment.

You all have unique talents and abilities. The Christ energy enhances them. It enhances your creativity, your love, your joy, your wisdom, your health and your life in general. I cannot expound enough on the benefits of meditation. Meditation can be used for inner guidance, or for directing energy and healing to a place in need. There are guided meditations and meditations for guidance. We will give you a little of both to assist you in your awakening.

In all meditation, begin by surrounding yourself with light, either gold or white. Have your chosen representative of the Father assist you. If something doesn't feel right, heal until you feel clear. We will give a method of healing that will assist you.

There is one precaution. Venturing into new territory creates a greater need for self-authority and healing. As you expand in consciousness and become more sensitive, the ability to heal what is within that greater reality is of utmost importance.

You will only expand to the extent that you feel safe and free of negative influences. Enjoy the love, joy, wisdom and power and, by all means, use the tools. Allow nothing to stand between you and the unique loving, joyous, powerful, manifesting God that you are. It is your birthright.

There is one more topic we would like to address. Do not try to blank out your mind. Your mind is a computer that is constantly in action. Let it run. Do not fight it. Allow it, and shift into higher frequency thought. Focus on love and joy and feel yourself expanding. In time, your mind will run out of gas, so to speak, the chattering will ease up, and higher frequency attitudes and emotions of higher consciousness will begin to take over. Continue to fill yourself with love and joy, and you will ascend in consciousness. What you are looking for are levels of higher frequency thought—interdimensional mind. If you try to stop the mind, you will set yourself up for failure. If a lower vibrational attitude or emotion comes forward, simply heal it with a corresponding principle or truth. Release it and move on.

Channeling

All of your sacred books speak of channeling in one form or another. What do you think prophecy is? All of your saints and sages were channels. They were all unique expressions of God. When Jesus spoke the words, "I of myself do nothing, it is the Father within that doeth the works," he was explaining a method of allowing the Father to flow through him in all of his words and deeds. Paul said that we have "bodies terrestrial and bodies celestial." He was explaining our celestial counterparts—aspects of self expressing on other planes and dimensions.

You all have guides, angels and celestial counterparts to assist you. If it is your will, they will bring more love and joy into your life. They will also bring more unlimited thought, which assists you in more unlimited creations. You must expand your reality beyond the physical body and the intellect. You have allowed fear and false beliefs to separate you from the rest of the universe. Not one of you is unworthy of channeling the "All That Is The All" into all that you say and do. This was the message Jesus conveyed when he spoke the words, "Ye will do greater works than I, for I go on to the Father."

We must go back to your origin to truly understand channeling. In the beginning, you were given consciousness and free will. The consciousness was the same consciousness as God. This was the understanding conveyed by Jesus when he said, "Ye are all Gods." It is also written that you were created in the same image and likeness of God. This being your true nature, it is perfectly logical that in consciousness, you are one with all life and can connect with any life form you choose. In reality, you are light beings expressing in a
