The Magic of Tesla's Purple Energy Plates

By Corrine De Winter

Imagine owning an object that had the power to change for better the water you drink, the food you eat and even the people you know. It sounds like a plot for a science-fiction movie, but in recent years there have been some incredible claims and results in conjunction with Purple Energy Plates, sometimes called Purple Harmony Plates. Although the Tesla-inspired plates have been used for more than 28 years, they are just now gaining recognition due to New Age interest in miracles and spirituality. The violet-colored plates are said to emit positive energy and affect certain objects placed on them. They range in size from one square inch to one square foot.

"All matter comes from a primary substance, the luminiferous ether," stated Nikola Tesla. As Margaret Cheney wrote in Tesla: Man Out of Time, Tesla sensed that the universe was "composed of a symphony of alternating currents with the harmonies played on a vast range of octaves. To explore the whole range of electrical vibration, he sensed, would bring him closer to an understanding of the cosmic symphony." Tesla understood that the cosmic symphony is resonance. Nothing exists in the universe that does not have harmonic vibration. In realizing this, Tesla influenced the production of personal oscillators that vibrate in tune with "the luminiferous ether." Thus, the creation of Purple Energy Plates.

How They Work

The atomic structure of Purple Plates has been altered, allowing the atoms and electrons of the aluminum to resonate in tune with the basic energy that causes the particles of every atom and molecule to be in constant vibration. Once the structure of the atoms of the aluminum has been altered, they will remain in that condition—perhaps indefinitely. The plates create a positive energy field around themselves that will penetrate any material substance by osmosis. This energy is said to be beneficial to all life—plant, animal, or human.

Science has proven that, by projecting love or positive energy to a plant, the plant will flourish. The plate energy has the same effect on plants.

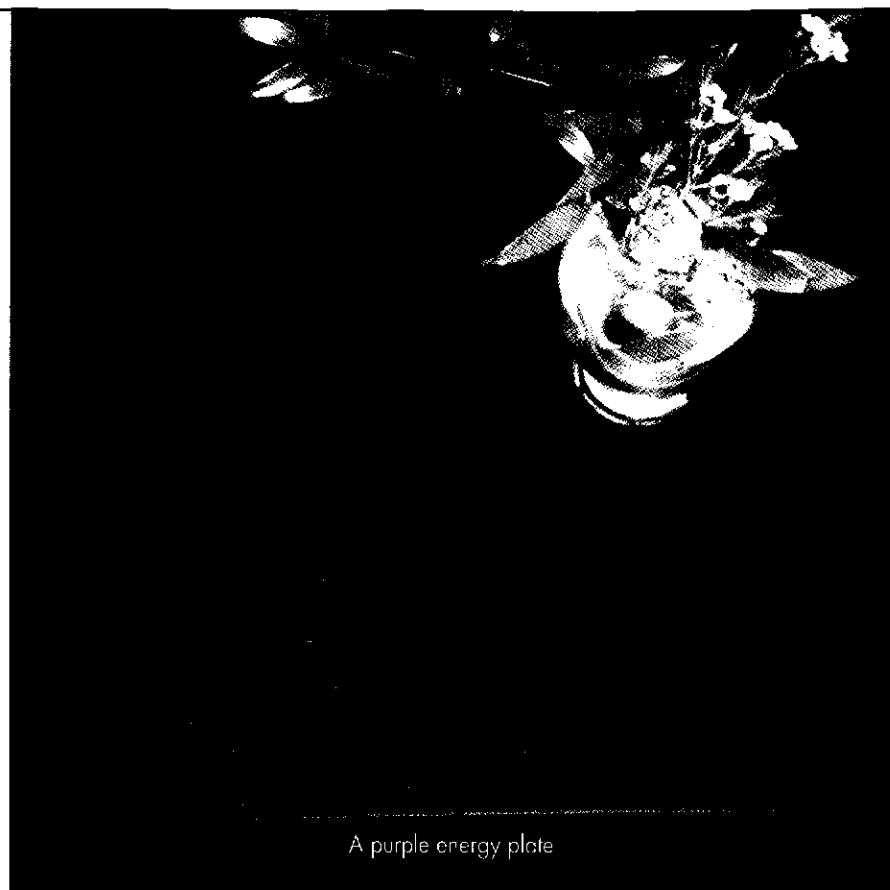

Burns, cuts, aches, and pains involve a sudden change in the normal vibration rate of tissue. The theory is that the energy around the plates helps to accelerate the healing and thus return the injured area to its normal rate of vibration. Among the plates' many uses are raising personal energy levels and protecting one against electromagnetic radiation (EMR) in the environment and from EMR-producing equipment, such as computers and televisions. The life-force energy of the plates can be measured by radionic equipment. When using this measurement, the energy level of an individual who has begun to work on him/herself might oscillate (or vibrate) around 25,000 cycles a second. When this person holds a purple plate, the reading immediately increases to 90,000–95,000 cycles a second. It will not remain at that level, but with continual use of the plate, it will slowly increase to a steady 100,000 cycles per second. All faith healing utilizes this higher energy.

In his book Beyond Ascension, Joshua Stone refers to the plates: "One of the most extraordinary tools I have found to raise my overall energy and even light my quotient is the Positive Energy Plate. I am not one for gadgets. I have seen them all and I use almost none of them. The one exception I make is the use of the purple plate, which I am sure many of you have seen. It is actually a free-energy plate. The Purple Plate not only cleared the food of all negative energy and negative residues such as pesticides, but also energized the food. Now I put all my food on it and continue to be amazed."

Stone goes on to claim that no matter what your diet is, if you use the Positive Energy Plate it will guarantee that you will get the positive energy that you need. "...I don't own stock in the company, nor do I know the person who invented them. I am just very excited about all the ways this Positive Energy Plate can be used."

Utilizing the Plate's Power

Many people use the large plates in their refrigerators to enhance flavor and freshness. By placing a glass of water on a small purple plate for approximately five minutes, you induce the high spiritual vibration of the seventh color ray (violet). Violet is also the color of the flame of Saint Germain, and corresponds with the seventh energy center in our bodies, also known as the crown chakra. Some people sleep with a plate beneath their pillow to ensure restfulness, even when one has only slept a short time. Others cannot sleep with the plates nearby, as they will remain awake. Wearing a small plate will cause most people to feel an increase in energy. Others find the best results wearing them for shorter periods of time, perhaps 30 minutes or an hour each day. The time spent wearing one depends on the person, and experimenting with the plates will let you know how much your particular chemistry is influenced by them. My own experience with purple plates, for the past two years and a half, has been an adventure to be sure. I regularly place all my drinking water on the plates and find that, when I drink this water, I am noticeably more energetic and less fatigued. However, when I tried to sleep with a small purple plate under my pillow, I suffered insomnia. I also tested placing inexpensive wine on the plate after reading that it would much improve the taste, and was nothing less than amazed by the results. Strangely though, others claim that it will turn quality wine to vinegar, and a mixed drink, such as vodka and soda, to mere water.

When I first read about them in Linda Goodman's Star Signs book, I was hesitant to believe in the seemingly miraculous properties of these bright, strange-looking plates, but I was extremely curious to see if they did in fact influence all she claimed they would. Goodman mentions that the person who created the plates with Nikola Tesla preferred to remain anonymous. However, after the inventor's death, the company which produced the plates decided to give him due credit. The inventor, Ralph Bergstresser, was born in 1912 in Pueblo, Colorado, of German parents who immigrated to the United States. He was extremely interested in free energy, or Zero Point Energy as it is now called in scientific circles. Bergstresser carefully studied anything written about Nikola Tesla's experiments, and attended many lectures given by Tesla. At one point they were introduced, and quickly became friends due to their shared interest in free energy. Until Tesla's death in 1943, they had numerous conversations on the process of tapping free energy. After Tesla's death, Bergstresser was able to discover the secret of altering the aluminum in the Positive Energy Plates from clues and notations in Tesla's notebooks. Also instrumental in leading Bergstresser to the discovery of healing energy was an incident which took place while he was a guest of a maharajah in India some 50 years ago.

Wrote Bergstresser: "The maharajah had an 8-month-old son that was very sick. I asked if he was going to get a doctor. He said 'no, we have sent a man to obtain some holy water from the Ganges River.' In 3 days, the man came back with one gallon of water. They fed the water to the sick child and...like magic, the child was healed and back to normal. To me, a miracle is an inability to understand a scientific fact. How could the water cure the child? That was the problem. It was this incident that triggered my curious mind to find the answer and this led me into the present knowledge."

He goes on to explain why the water of the Ganges purportedly has the power to heal. "For thousands of years the native population of India have used the water from the Ganges for healing. Gallon jugs of this water from the Ganges have been stored for over half a century at the University of Calcutta, and are still completely free of bacteria. What causes the water to have such fantastic healing powers? A tributary of water, that eventually finds its way into the Ganges River, originates and begins its long journey from high in the Himalayan Mountains. It is there, high in the mountains where the atmosphere is clear and clean, that nature begins the natural process of creating special water. This process starts when the mountain and its snow cover is bombarded by the higher energies of the Universe, known as cosmic energy. This bombardment by cosmic fourth dimensional energy alters the atomic and molecular structure of the rocks and granite that constitute these magnificent mountains, and in turn, changes the chemistry of the snow and water as it flows over them and down to the lowlands. This chemistry change is adding the Life Force Energy to the water. It is the Life Force Energy, which has now become an intricate part of the water, that produces the healing miracles of the Ganges River. The key to this phenomenon is now known and utilized to produce the energy plates and products."

Bergstresser, who was also the author of a handful of metaphysical books, died in 1998 at the age of 86.

Perhaps most curious to me in Linda Goodman's description of the plates was the part concerned with the influencing of persons with the plates. Goodman writes that the plates possess the power to influence a person through the use of a photograph placed face down on the surface. She uses the example of a friend's husband who was an alcoholic prone to negative behavior, and who was badly in need of positivity. Soon after using the husband's photograph on the purple plate, he began a recovery which included sobriety and hopefulness. However, Goodman, as well as others, warn that leaving a photograph on the plate for any more than 15 minutes to a half hour at a time can cause nervousness or anxiety in some people. She also warns that attempting to influence a person in a negative fashion will not work.

There are many uses for the purple plates. Here are only a few suggestions. With continued personal use you'll discover countless others.

1. Place a small-sized plate in a pocket or purse for more energy. (No body contact is necessary.)
2. Place large plate in refrigerator (center shelf is best). Food, with the exception of fresh meat and fish, will stay fresh longer.
3. Place beneath sick house plants, or water sick plants with water that has been placed on plate overnight.
4. Place small plate in dog or cat bed, or under food dish.
5. To energize crystals, place on purple plate for 12 hours.
6. Use the plate on injured area of any living thing.
7. Travelers can carry a small plate to energize their drinking water and eliminate illness and stomach upsets.
8. Small plate placed on forehead to alleviate headache pain, on joints to alleviate gout and arthritis pain, on stomach to stop nausea.
9. Placed on forehead in the morning will help you to remember your dreams. Also place on forehead to promote deeper meditation.

I have also read testimonials from plate users who claim they help with cramps, headaches, stomach upsets, stiff joints, torticollis, swelling, ringworm, "clicking" jaw, alcoholism, anxiety, colic, and depression.

The Genius of Tesla

It's not surprising that the complex genius of Nikola Tesla would influence a "free energy" device. Tesla, born in 1856 in the village of Smiljan, province of Lika (Austria-Hungary), was an eccentric but highly intelligent inventor. He created many of our modern-day conveniences, including AC (or alternating current, the basis of almost every electrical device), X-rays, fluorescent lighting, the induction motor (which utilized his rotating magnetic field principle), and terrestrial stationary waves, which he regarded as his most important discovery. By this discovery he proved that the earth could be used as a conductor and would be as responsive as a tuning fork to electrical vibrations of a certain pitch. At one time he was certain he had received signals from another planet in his Colorado laboratory, a claim that was met with derision in some scientific journals. The Tesla coil, which he invented in 1891, is widely used today in radio and television sets and other electronic equipment for wireless communication. It is also now known that Tesla's radio patents predated those of the credited inventor, Guglielmo Marconi. Tesla's theories were met with increasing criticism, especially after his claims that he could split the earth like an apple, and that he had invented a death ray capable of destroying 10,000 airplanes from 250 miles away. Due to lack of funds (perhaps because of his seemingly odd personality traits, which included a progressive germ phobia), most of his ideas remained in his notebooks, which are still studied by engineers today.

Tesla died in New York City on January 7, 1943, the holder of more than 700 patents. The Custodian of Alien Property impounded his trunks, which contained his letters and laboratory notes. Eventually these were inherited by Tesla's nephew, Sava Kosanovich, and later installed in the Nikola Tesla Museum in Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

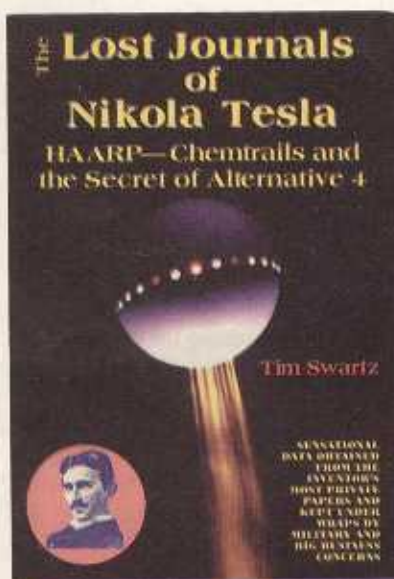

The incredible life work of Tesla lends much credence to the faith in the Purple Plate's healing properties. Although the exact process of creating these plates seems to be kept confidential by the makers of them, I have personally found them to be a remarkable tool for well-being. df one of which occurs in consensus reality."

Quantum Mind is a new exploration of this and other paranormal phenomena once relegated by serious scientists to the lunatic fringe of metaphysics. With their recognition of the interplay of energies once deemed separable from material, they too must now reconsider the infinite physical-spiritual possibilities presented in Mindell's new book.—Frank Joseph

The Lost Journals of Nikola Tesla

By Tim Swartz

Global Communications (New Brunswick, N.J.), softcover, 2000, 156 pgs., $14.95

Nikola Tesla's name is one of many mantras of the New Age movement. An inventor and a pioneer in the early days of the commercial development of electricity, Tesla is also revered by some as a saint and a prophet who began paving the way to a future technological Garden of Eden. He is nowadays credited with the initial discoveries that eventually resulted in the creation of radio, television, AC electricity, fluorescent and neon lighting, robotics, x-rays, radar, and microwaves, among numerous others.

But as is so often the case with a genius like Tesla, he never received the public honor or the financial rewards he deserved. He died in 1943 in poverty and relative obscurity. In his final days, Tesla was forced to move from hotel to hotel, moves that necessitated his leaving whole trunks of notes and diagrams for further inventions behind him. It is believed that after his death, the federal government confiscated and classified much of that material for national security reasons having to do with the possible military uses of some of Tesla's inventions.

But the feds didn't get everything. In 1976, at an auction in Newark, New Jersey, a man named Dale Alfrey bought four boxes of papers for around $25. Not realizing the importance of what he had in his hands, Alfrey thought at first he had uncovered the notes of a science-fiction writer.

All of which sets the stage for the story Tim Swartz relates in The Lost Journals of Nikola Tesla.

"These lost journals revealed," Swartz writes, "that in 1899, while in Colorado Springs, Tesla intercepted communications from extraterrestrial beings who were secretly controlling mankind. These creatures were slowly preparing humans for eventual conquest and domination..."

Just as in a well-written mystery where the plot thickens, Swartz goes on to narrate the spellbinding saga of Tesla's struggle with aliens he believed to be hostile. The tale is told against a backdrop of industrial espionage and governmental secrecy that would indeed make a good science-fiction yarn were it not for the fact that the events allegedly really happened.

When Tesla publicly stated he was receiving extraterrestrial transmissions through both a machine intended originally to detect electrical storms at great distances, as well as by means of an early form of radio receiver he invented, he received the standard ridicule commonly dumped on UFO witnesses today. But Tesla never wavered in his conviction that the voices were genuine and intended great harm to all mankind.
